About This Collection

Sixty Qur'ānic Supplications

Among the treasures of the Qur'ān are the supplications that Allāh Himself records upon the tongues of His prophets, His angels, and His righteous servants. Beginning with Rabbanā ("Our Lord…") or Rabbi ("My Lord…"), these du'ās have a unique distinction: their very wording has been chosen by Allāh, preserved in His Book, and — in many cases — is immediately answered in the verses that follow.

This collection presents supplications in the order of the muṣḥaf, from Sūrah al-Baqarah to the refuge of Sūrah an-Nās. They include the first du'ā of mankind — the repentance of Ādam and Ḥawwā' — the prayers of Ibrāhīm as he raised the foundations of the Ka'bah, the cry of Yūnus in the darkness of the whale's belly, the plea of Ayyūb in his long affliction, the du'ā of Āsiyah from within the palace of Pharaoh, and the prayer of the angels who bear the Throne, made on behalf of every believer who repents.

Each du'ā is presented on its own page with the fully vocalized Arabic text, a careful English transliteration for those still learning to read Arabic, a clear English translation, the exact sūrah and verse reference, and a short note on who made the du'ā and in what circumstance.

How to Use This Book

- Memorize one du'ā at a time; the transliteration is an aid, but strive to read the Arabic itself.
- Understand who first made each du'ā — reciting it then becomes an act of remembrance as well as petition.
- Choose du'ās that match your state: repentance, patience, gratitude, protection, family, or knowledge.
- Recite with presence of heart, facing Allāh with certainty that He answers (Ghāfir 40:60).

A Note on the Text

Verification & Presentation

Every Arabic text in this book has been checked, word by word, against the standard text of the Qur'ān (the Madani muṣḥaf, presented here in standard modern orthography with full vocalization). The sūrah and verse references have likewise been verified. Where a du'ā forms part of a longer verse, the supplicatory portion is presented, as indicated in the reference.

Editorial Conventions

- The mark ● separates consecutive verses within a single du'ā.
- Small pause marks (ۘ) follow the standard muṣḥaf and may be observed when reciting.
- Transliteration follows a simplified scholarly system: long vowels are written ā, ī, ū; emphatic letters ḥ, ṣ, ḍ, ṭ, ẓ; the letter 'ayn as ' and hamzah as ’. Assimilation (idghām) at word junctions is written as pronounced — e.g., ḥasanataw-wa.
- Verse numbering follows the Kufan count of the Madani muṣḥaf.
- Where the Qur'ān reports a du'ā in indirect speech (e.g., Ayyūb's plea in 21:83), the customary recitable form with the vocative Rabbi is given, as found in the classical du'ā collections.

The translation aims at clarity and faithfulness rather than literary ornament; it may be compared with any of the established English translations. Any shortcoming is from the compiler, and all perfection belongs to Allāh.

The Etiquette of Du‘ā

Adab of Supplication

- Begin with praise of Allāh and ṣalāh upon the Prophet صلى الله عليه وسلم.
- Face the qiblah where possible, raise the hands, and supplicate in a state of purity.
- Ask with certainty, humility, and a present heart; repeat the du‘ā three times.
- Seek the blessed times: the last third of the night, between adhān and iqāmah, in sujūd, on Fridays, while fasting, and in travel.
- Be patient with the answer — it may be granted, deferred, or exchanged for something better.

May Allāh place these sixty du‘ās upon our tongues and in our hearts, and may He answer them for us, for our parents, and for all the believers.

سُبْحَانَ رَبِّكَ رَبِّ الْعِزَّةِ عَمَّا يَصِفُونَ ● وَسَلَامٌ عَلَى الْمُرْسَلِينَ ● وَالْحَمْدُ لِلَّهِ رَبِّ الْعَالَمِينَ
